Dear Mr. Buschatzke,

I am in opposition to an INA for the Hualapai Basin. I am also very concerned that my city and county government's limited understanding of these complex issues is being pushed out to the public via propaganda in the form of pamphlets. For a public works department to distort the truth in hopes of garnering support for an issue they have proven to have very little understanding of is shameful. Not to mention a waste of taxpayer dollars.

Much to my disappointment, the city/county has shown little initiative in implementing other methods for conserving water (for instance, not using groundwater on a golf course, updating building codes, etc.). The nearest thing they have done is spend one million dollars on a recharge well that is still NOT fully functional. While an INA is not necessary for the Hualapai basin; a thoughtful, fact-based, multi-faceted approach is needed to optimize the water, industry, and livelihood of the citizens of Mohave County and the state of Arizona. I am wholeheartedly opposed to an INA. It is not in the best interest of this community as the basin is not in crisis and it should not be implemented.

Respectfully,
Jessica Medina
