My questions are as follows:

When there are only 20,005 farms and 615,000 swimming pools in Arizona Why are farmers only targeted for wasted in the Mojave area targeted?

Irrigation doesn't waste water it can replenish ground water what is the problem?

Swimming pools (septic tanks) with evaporated water into the clouds sends water out of state. Why not pass a law that swimming pool can only use Salt water transported from the Pacific ocean. Then you don't have to build a desalination plant, the community can do it for you with reverse osmosis filters?

I would venture a few guesses, but they would be political. (Alfalfa exports?)

Would appreciate acknowledgement you received this email. I don't expect a reply, but I plan to be at the meeting in Kingman with these questions.

I Purchased 40 acres last year in this area to grow blueberry, raspberry, and other bramble berries. It has a well and planned to make it open to the public so poorer residents could come and pick their own fruit & berries. Now I guess I can only plant less than two acres. Poor investment? Or blame it on the drought?

Sincerely yours
